

*Dr. A. Pavani Presents
Research Paper at International Conference on Sustainable Development Goals*

Dr. A. Pavani, Professor of English, Department of Humanities and Sciences, presented a research paper titled “Voices from the Margins: Subaltern Literature as a Framework for Sustainable Development” in virtual mode at the 2nd International Conference on Emerging Ideas on Sustainable Development Goals (ICEISDG) organized by Srinath University on 6th and 7th February 2026. The conference brought together academicians, researchers, and scholars from various institutions to deliberate on innovative approaches and interdisciplinary perspectives related to the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs). Dr. Pavani’s presentation explored how subaltern literature amplifies marginalized voices and contributes to a deeper understanding of social equity, inclusivity, and sustainable societal progress.

Her paper highlighted the intersection of literature and sustainable development, emphasizing how narratives from marginalized communities can serve as a critical framework for addressing issues such as social justice, gender equality, and inclusive growth. By integrating literary studies with contemporary global development discourse, the research underscored the relevance of humanities in achieving long-term sustainability goals. Her participation in this prestigious international conference reflects the department’s commitment to academic excellence, research contribution, and global engagement, thereby enhancing the scholarly profile of the institution.
